Conditionals
Change the following sentences to inverted conditionals.

If he were the president, he would provide better for us.

_____

If my boss should call, please take a message.

_____

If airport security had known about the dangers, they would have secured the airport better.

_____

If they had not secured the airport properly, something terrible would have happened.

_____

Conditionals with mixed times.
If he knew about the problem last week, why hasn't he done anything about it?
      What times are these? _____
      What does the if clause express? Present real, past real, etc.

_____

If you studied last weekend, you should have known the answer.
      What times are these? _____
      What does the if clause express?

_____

If Jane had sold a lot of houses, she would have a lot of money now.
      What times are these? _____
      What does the if clause express?

_____

If you had a better job, your girlfriend wouldn't have left you.
      What times are these? _____
      What does the if clause express?

_____

If you had gone to the party, you would not be asking so questions about it now.
      What times are these? _____
      What does the *if c*lause express?

_____

Myra M. Medina
Miami-Dade College